Angela >A family says it's worried about its pet dog after being served dead, fresh meat. The brothers and sister of a family in the U.K. say they just returned from a vacation and found their dog eating the meat of a dead fawn. Samantha and Sarah Archibald said they received a call from their neighbor, who told them he found the dead animal near their shed. "I went and picked him up this morning," Sam wrote on Facebook. "I'm so mad that this did happen! We were gone from home overnight and I'm sure he must have found him out the back of the shed and then must have decided to chow down on him." The 26-pound pit bull mix, Jake, is a family member and it's "sickening to think he would do this to a dead animal," the siblings wrote. "I have to go and chop him up tomorrow. Oh my god. It's crazy! We're all heart broken!" Sam added. Jake is currently in quarantine and the family said it's getting the dog tested. They are worried about rabies. "The whole day has been so upsetting. What's going to happen now is that it's all too much for me and I may have to go into hospital tomorrow," Sam wrote. The Archibalds shared a picture of Jake eating the fawn. Amber MacDiarmid called Fox 2 Detroit with a similar experience with a dog. "I

Q: Building a Java application for iPhone/iPad/Android I am having trouble trying to figure out how to build a Java app for iOS. I know how to do the usual "add the iphone target" in Eclipse (as described here: but when trying to do the same with the iPad app target, I get a silly error message from Xcode: Invalid architecture: a simulator is required How to I configure my project so that I can build a Java project for both the iPad and iPhone? I tried setting a version of the framework I want to use ("Java Development Kit for iPhone OS Development" under "Frameworks and Libraries" in Xcode) but then it complains that it is "not of any of the architectures" (even though it is selected, and the machine is running a 64-bit OS). I also tried setting a different architecture (Xcode is really picky about that) but that didn't work either. I also tried setting the "Build Active Architecture Only" to "Yes" (thus forcing the target to build only for one architecture at a time) but I still got the same error message. There is a "Java Development Kit" target, but selecting it builds a "C and C++ Standard Library" target as well as a "Mac OS X" target (which I don't need). Help? A: I'm not sure why the other answer is so popular, but the "Invalid architecture" error is given because you're running it on a simulator, so you don't need to select the Java Development Kit on the "iOS Simulator" target. It's possible there may be another error you're running into, but you really just need to be sure you're selecting the "Java Development Kit for iPhone OS Development" framework.
